Dave, Drew and Josh

Renovation

We are renovating our working place. Today the four of us are very busy to make it more beautiful. Dave, our boss, is busy making a cinema for the kids in the corner. He does not see his brother Drew coming in. I do. I just looked around to see how beautiful the place has become already.

Who knows what is best

Drew looks around and then he starts throwing a whole bucket of criticism over us:

"This is not good; that could be better; there you have to do something and that cannot stay like it is!" (You should know now that Drew is a very tall and heavy guy while I am a woman of average figure.)

A turning point

I grab him at the shoulders, turn him around swiftly and give him a little push towards the entrance door. There he goes...

After some steps he realises what happened. He stops and turns around towards me completely astonished.

I say to Drew: "This family is sometimes really terrible! We are very busy here, working hard, the work is not even finished and you already have endless criticisms!"

A Good conversation

In between Dave finds out his brother is there and says: "Yes Drew, sometimes you are just like dad is..." The brothers start a good conversation now and I "have to be" in the kitchen fast. (Indeed Josh, who is their dad, was here yesterday and he was having a stream like a river of criticism.)

That was not me...

The things I did myself surprised me the most. I would never consider doing such a thing. Things like turning around a guy like a tree, really without any effort. Sending him out, and see him going!

This must have been The Holy Spirit. Drew really needed a lesson in truth. I hope the Holy Spirit will use me more times like this, as a tool for God.

Later I heard Dave talk to someone: "Beware of her, do not make her angry, because than she is very strong!"
